

State Admissions Day Act of 2006

May 12, 2006

Dear Colleague:

Let us stand together to honor America by paying tribute to the fifty states that make this nation great and give meaning to the phrase E Pluribus Unum.

The State Admission Day Recognition Act of 2006 honors each of the 50 states in our great country by flying their respective flag over the Capitol building on the anniversary of their admission into the Union.

Through out our history, the United States of America has demonstrated to the world that a representative government can flourish when citizen states are united by the common goals of liberty and justice for all.

The joining of 50 sovereign states, each with individual pride and purpose, under a common flag in a more perfect union symbolizes America's greatest strength, the unity of its citizens.

This bill draws upon the common thread of patriotism that runs through all Americans. The bill, with your support, will enable the flag of each state to be flown over the Capitol under the Stars and Stripes. Each time a state's flag is raised to commemorate its induction into the United States it will serve as a symbol of the pride of each state and the unity of the United States of America.
